As the values of musclecars, hotrods, and classics continue to rise, so does theft. Ravelco's anti theft device offers a unique solution for gearheads looking to protect their cars with an easy-to-use security device consisting of a small 16 pin-plug that can be mounted out of sight under the dash where it won't affect the original appearance or electrical system of a collector car. Essentially, when you remove the plug, it's like cutting the vehicle's wiring harness at several locations. Without inserting the plug there is no way for a thief to start the car.

The device can be installed in pretty much any vehicle in an hour or two, works with any engine or trans, and won't interfere with any other alarm system, tracking device, or immobilization system already installed on the car. With 3.5 million installations to date, Ravelco claims its system has never been beaten.
